

FOSTERS LEAVE HOTEL SUITE FOR A HARLEM FLAT

Begging Letter Writer's Family
Destitute, Go to Wife's Mother.

Mrs. William A. Foster, whose husband, the professional begging letter writer, was sent to Blackwell's Island on Wednesday on a six months' sentence for vagrancy, moved yesterday from the "royal suite" in the Clarendon Hotel, where she and her husband lived for a year, to a five-room flat at No. 401 West One Hundred and Thirty-fifth street.

It was not easy for Mrs. Foster to give up the luxurious hotel suite for the cramped little Harlem flat, but her husband left a $500 hotel bill behind and there was nothing for her to do but go.

not a dollar and his wife was forced to go to the home of her mother, Mrs. Margaret Paul. She took her five children, Edith, aged eight; Arthur, seven; Dorothy, five; Richard, two, and Ella, a babe of fourteen months, and early yesterday they arrived at the Paul flat.

Mrs. Paul keeps boarders and has little room to spare, but she gave her daughter and the brood of little Fosters the parlor and there they settled themselves. Mrs. Foster had two trunks full of clothes and because of lack of room they had to be put in the cellar. The woman was well liked and the sudden turn of fortune. She started out in the afternoon to seek out old-time friends and try to obtain funds to maintain herself and her children while Foster is locked up. She had poor success and returned to her mother's flat tired and with a heavy heart.

"I don't know what I am going to do," she said. "If they had only given my husband a little time he would have paid all his debts. He is not dishonest. I have an idea where I am to live until he comes out of the penitentiary. I cannot stay at my mother's and yet I don't know where to seek shelter."

"It isn't so hard to give up the fine apartments we had as to face the world alone and the baby requires all my attention. This is a terrible load to carry on a mother's heart on Thanksgiving Day."
